Members of the City Council

on January third

One thousand nine hundred and seventy-seven in Washington, District of Columbia

"Home Rule for the District of Columbia was not easily achieved. Many people, black and white, fought hard to make it a reality. Now we must all work together to make it a success. As President of the United States, and as a new resident in the District of Columbia, I intend to do my part to make this a better, stronger, and safer community for all its citizens, and I look forward to cooperating with the D.C. City Council in that effort."

Delegate Walter E. Fauntroy

District of Columbia

I am delighted to have this opportunity to commend and congratulate those members of our City Council who have been re-elected to another term of service. My congratulations also go to the newest member of the Council, Attorney Wilhelmina Rolark.

I am optimistic for the future of the District of Columbia. With the new Carter Administration, we will have at the White House and in positions of leadership in the Federal Government people more responsive and sensitive to our interests and needs in the Nation's Capital.

To the City Council, I renew my pledge, as your elected representative in Congress, to work and cooperate with you fully in support of your efforts to solve the problems of this city. Let us all re-dedicate ourselves to achieve full and complete government for the District of Columbia.

Walter E. Washington

Mayor

District of Columbia

"Fellow Citizens: For the first time in more than 100 years, citizens of this community have selected city officials to help guide their destiny. We stand on the threshold of a great, new era, and we must take full advantage of the opportunities self-government offers us.

It is up to each of us individually and collectively to move this City toward the day when the needs of all our people will be met. This task will be accomplished when we develop a unity of purpose and cooperatively use our energies to achieve this common goal. I have faith that you the people of this great city will do this and I believe we can and will accomplish great things together.

I am deeply grateful for the opportunity to have served you as the City's Chief Executive during the last seven years. A great source of strength to me during this time was the strong support given by our citizens during our times of need.

I ask all of you to continue to provide that support to the new administration which today assumes responsibility for creating a stronger city government.

A glorious future can be ours if we are together. The times ahead demand it. It will test the courage, integrity and wisdom of all of us. Therefore, let us now resolve to move forward in unison and with faith in our ability to make our city the greatest in the world."

WELCOME!

Council of the District of Columbia Legislative Session

Council Chamber

The Council of the District of Columbia is the Legislative Branch of our City Government, as provided in the District of Columbia Self-Government and Government Reorganization Act passed by Congress, signed into law by the President of the United States on December 24, 1973, and approved by city residents on May 7, 1974. Following the primary and general elections in September and November, the new elected government was inaugurated on January 2, 1975.

The Council's Powers are comparable to those of a state legislature, and because the District has no state or county ties, the local government performs a number of extra-municipal functions—filling in as a county government for services such as the recording of deeds and as a state government for other services such as the registration of automobiles. The District of Columbia is treated as both a state and a city in federal legislation—as a city which must serve local residents, and as the Nation's Capital, which must serve all the citizens of the country.

It is therefore the function of the Council to legislate—enact laws and regulate ordinances to meet the needs of the District. The Council has the authority to reorganize the offices and agencies of the Executive Branch of the City Government. However, the Mayor is the chief executive of the District of Columbia, and is responsible for providing the services and programs that the residents and visitors to the city require and for carrying out the laws enacted by the Council, as well as those laws enacted by the Congress which affect the District.

Under constitutional authority, the Congress can enact laws on any subject affecting the District, and under the "Home Rule Charter" all legislation enacted by the Council—except for emergency measures, is sent to Congress for review for 30 working days. The legislation takes effect after that period unless during that time both houses of Congress adopt resolutions disapproving the act.

The Mayor may veto legislation passed by the Council. However, his veto may be over-ridden by a two-thirds vote of the Council; the President of the United States may then act within 30 calendar days to uphold the veto, in which case the measure dies, or to uphold the "over-ride" and forward the measure to Congress for review as mentioned above.

Elected on a partisan basis as candidates of their respective Democratic, Republican, and Statehood political parties, the 13 Councilmembers serve four-year terms on a staggered basis; half of the members elected every two years. Of the original 13, two of the at-large members and four of the ward members, selections determined by lot conducted by the Board of Elections, were candidates for re-election on September 14, 1976, after having served two years. By this method the four-year staggered system has been established. The re-elected members, and the newly elected member who defeated the incumbered representative for ward 8, are:

"The citizens of the District of Columbia have been struggling for the past 100 years for full self determination and first class citizenship. Even though the District of Columbia has a population larger than 11 states, we have been forced to live as second class citizens under the direct control of Congress. All of my energies, experience and expertise will be used to make the government responsive to the needs of all of our citizens."

* Marion Barry

At-Large

"Two years of Home Rule are behind us. We have learned many things about self government. Citizens and elected officials have striven to make our limited form of government work. We have proven that we can govern ourselves. The future is secure only to the extent that we act wisely together as a united people. We will continue building a city of which all can be proud."

* Jerry A. Moore, Jr.

At-Large

"The human capacity for survival is a great American thirst. We live in a city that is thirsty for life and determined to survive. The city can be no more than what the citizens make it."

* John A. Wilson Ward 2

"Self Government was evidenced as a necessary vehicle to operate our city. We must, as council members and citizens, view ourselves as the spokes which make the wheel function effectively."

* Arrington Dixon Ward 4

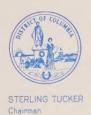

"As Washington moves forward into its third year of Home Rule, we, now more than ever, must look towards the future and remember the past. Our future holds many of the same social and economic stumbling blocks that our past has revealed. Working together we can hurdle both the small and the large, the insignificant and the monumental."

Willie Hardy * Ward 7

"Home Rule can succeed only if it is valued as a cooperative venture between the elected officials and the D.C. citizens. Together we can make it work."
